What's In It for Me? - A Question Worth Asking

As we step into another month of learning, activities, and engagements at IGSB, I would like to reflect on a question that quietly sits in the minds of many management students:

"What is in it for me?"

At first glance, this question may seem self-centred. In reality, it is deeply self-aware. Every meaningful learning journey begins when a student pauses to reflect on purpose, relevance, and personal growth.

An MBA is not merely a collection of lectures, assignments, or placement statistics. It is a carefully designed experience meant to shape how students think, decide, communicate, and lead. The true value of this journey unfolds when students consciously connect classroom learning with their own aspirations.

At IGSB, every case discussion, presentation, internship, guest session, and co-curricular activity carries a hidden invitation:

What are you taking away from this experience?

Is it clarity? Confidence? A new skill? A fresh perspective?

When students shift from asking "What will I get?" to "What can I learn and apply?", transformation begins. The MBA then becomes more than a degree-it becomes a process of self-discovery, professional grooming, and mindset development.

This month's bulletin captures several such moments of engagement, learning, and participation. I encourage our students to read it not just as a record of events, but as a mirror-reflecting opportunities they can actively leverage.

After all, the real "What's In It for Me" of an MBA lies not in what is offered, but in what is embraced.

EDITORIAL NOTE

As you read through this month's bulletin, pause for a moment and reflect:

- What did I actively learn this month beyond the syllabus?
- Which activity, discussion, or challenge helped me grow?
- What skill did I consciously work on-communication, analysis, teamwork, or leadership?

We encourage every BRIGGS student to move from passive participation to purposeful engagement.

- Speak up in class-even when you are unsure.
- Take ownership of group work-not just responsibility.
- Treat internships, projects, and events as learning labs, not formalities.
- Seek feedback from faculty and peers and act on it.
- Use campus opportunities to discover not only your strengths, but also your gaps.

Remember, the MBA journey does not reward those who merely complete requirements; it transforms those who reflect, experiment, and apply.

The real answer to "What's in it for me?" emerges when you ask yourself a better question:

"What am I doing today to become a better professional tomorrow?"

Wishing all our students a month filled with curiosity, commitment, and conscious learning.

Warm regards,
Girija Shirurkar

HEADLINE OF THE MONTH

- Will Silver/Gold prices continue to go up?
- The investment thesis on Gold/Silver can be summarized in 1 sentence:-
- Bet on Silver/Gold is a bet against the US Bonds.
- In the last bull run of Silver/Gold, the US government did not buy much Gold. But, other governments like China & India did. Why?
 - US sells its bonds (US Treasuries) to world governments
 - The other governments keep these Treasuries as forex reserves.
 - What supported Silver/Gold prices was the turmoil caused by the US policies. Right from trade war to kicking Russia out of the SWIFT (US$ payment system).
- This gave a push to other governments to diversify their foreign holdings into other denominations like Gold.
- Will this continue? Hard to say.
- Here is the problem through:- for a government Gold does not generate a yield. This is different from a bond. When a government holds a bond, it generates a fixed return.
- Holding too much gold in the treasury is not always a good thing.
- Diversification is good.
- And, governments have already done it.
- So let's see if they buy more.
